Book examines Grail, prompts discussion

By Rick Funk

Protestant Chaplain

In the opening pages of the book, the curator of the Louvre in Paris is murdered, but not before he can leave a cryptic clue about his murderer and his message. Thus begins Dan Brown's thriller, "The da Vinci Code." Far different from your average whodunit, the book not only rambles around France and England literally searching for clues to the Holy Grail, it also meanders through an age old discussion of the nature of the church, the life of Jesus and the role of Mary Magdalene.

A few weeks ago, a couple dozen people sat around the small table in the magazine section of the library and discussed this fascinating book. We were a diverse crowd gathered with a common theme, "What's this all about?" We shared our ideas and our beliefs as we examined the various topics that Brown weaved throughout the story. In the preface to the book, Brown makes a statement of fact about certain places, documents and organizations. It's left to the reader to discern where the fact ends and the fiction begins.

Part of the story is the struggle between two organizations, Opus Dei and the Priory of Sion. Opus Dei is a conservative Catholic organization that does exist today. In the book, they are portrayed as fanatically and violently protecting the status quo of the church. The Priory of Sion, on the other hand, has a precious secret about the Holy Grail that it is determined to preserve and perhaps reveal at just the right time to the detriment of the orthodox doctrines of the faith. Personally, I don't believe the Priory of Sion exists as it is presented in the book, but that's another story.

So what is this precious secret? That the Holy Grail is not the chalice Jesus used in the Last Supper, but actually the fact that Jesus was married to Mary Magdalene and they had a child who became the progenitor of the Merovingian line of kings in France. This is not the way most people remember the Bible story in Sunday School. Brown includes references to many other documents that may support his point of view. Mary Magdalene represents not only a human companion to Jesus but also the feminine counterpart to God. Goddess worship is not new and, in fact, has an ancient history, but it is not included in orthodox Christianity because the majority opinion is that God is neither male nor female, but God, an entity that combines both male and female qualities plus the divine.

The intrigue of the book, not to mention the extremely fast pace of the murder mystery, is that it stirs emotions, stimulates discussions and spawns disagreements. Some are convinced of the conspiracy of the church while others defend its doctrine. Some are willing to accept that Jesus was married while others are incensed at even a hint of that. Some would love to promote goddess worship and the role of women and others can't imagine a world any different from what it is. I have my opinions on these matters, and I'm sure you have yours.

The point I'd like to make is that I'm glad this book has started a conversation on spiritual matters, or at least a search for truth. In the end, it's not our opinions that matter, but what actually exists. I could believe that God is a woman or Godzilla, but that doesn't change the actual nature of God. I hope that each of us would pursue truth to discover the real nature of humanity and divinity. And if you would like to pursue it with us, join in! We are planning on having a discussion on Dan Brown's previous book, "Angels and Demons" sometime in the fall.

Flag serves as symbol, rally point

Commentary by Jim Garamone

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — It wasn't all that long ago that everyone seemed to be flying an American flag.

In the days and weeks after the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington, American flags sprouted from everywhere.

At the World Trade Center site, New York firemen hoisted an American flag amid the rubble. At the Pentagon, workers paused and saluted as a huge garrison flag was draped next to the impact point.

Flags sprouted on mini-vans and motorcycles. People raised flags on new flagpoles on front lawns and atop apartment buildings. It seemed that every overpass on interstate highways had a flag. And this doesn't count the millions of decals, rub-ons and bumper stickers that featured the flag.

That was the latest manifestation of the flag of the United States of America as a symbol for all that the country stands for.

The flag as a symbol of America grew out of the War of 1812. Francis Scott Key was so inspired by the sight of the American flag flying over Fort McHenry on Sept. 12, 1814, that he wrote "The Star Spangled Banner."

It seems in time of crisis, the flag is a rallying point. The United States is more than just land fortunately located in North America. The United States is a republic, and Americans do not swear fealty to royalty or land or nobility. Rather, Americans swear to uphold the Constitution of the United States, and the American flag is a symbol of that oath.

Remember that oath and those who have died for the freedom the American flag represents.

Taylor to attend econ leadership program

High school junior Ian Taylor was selected to participate in the Gillette Company, Economics for Leaders program to be held at the University of Hawaii in Honolulu, next week, according to a press release.

Taylor was one of 30 students nationwide picked for the session, sponsored by the Gillette Company in partnership with The Foundation for Teaching Economics, a non-profit foundation based in Davis, Calif.

Ian Taylor

The release stated the course “combines leadership training and economics. During the week, students learn an economic way of thinking about human behavior and experience the interaction of different leadership styles within a group.”

Taylor will begin his senior year at Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School in the fall.

Kyle Benoit, son of former residents Steve and Diane Morrison, made sergeant at Camden Military Academy. Now entering his freshman year, he earned the rank and a gold star for an A grade point average during the first semester.

Donald Phillip is not the Aviation Department's only FAA certified Marshallese mechanic as stated in the June 11 story, “Phillip Sets Example for Scholar.” According to Doc Calladine, Aviation Maintenance trainer, four Marshallese mechanics hold an Airframe and Powerplant license — Phillip, Jebe Ninjine, John Edwin and Eddie Jormelu. “Additionally, to my knowledge, the first Marshallese A&P mechanic to be employed at USAKA was Philip Harry, who recently passed away and is sorely missed,” Calladine stated.

The Hourglass regrets the error.

KRS awards Ebeye students

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Like other recent high school graduates, Nicholas Phillip is looking at schools where he might attend in the fall.

He hopes to study math, English and the Bible.

Wednesday, Phillip and three other recent Ebeye high school graduates received $2,000 scholarships from Kwajalein Range Services to help toward their future studies.

Francesca Lakjohn of Father Hacker Catholic High School; Christopher Riklon of Jabro Private High School; Aster Gold of Seventh Day Adventist High School; and Phillip of Calvary High School each earned the award through the company program.

“This is one of our ways to pay back for all the hard work and hospitality you give KRS here on Kwajalein,” said Ike Richardson, KRS president.

Richardson presented each with a certificate and KRS hat. The money will go directly to the college or trade school of the students’ choice.

Riklon and Gold said they would attend College of the Marshall Islands in Majuro in the fall, while Lakjohn was not in attendance.

Each of the four Ebeye high schools selected a scholarship winner based on grades, community involvement, support for the school and character.

Phillip, for example, served as student body president and helped clean his school, he said.

He advised other students to, “study hard. Put God first. Fear the Lord, and be faithful in your studies.”

Richardson said later, “Hard work pays off. Don’t let anyone tell you different.”

The company president said he plans to make the scholarship an annual offering, but between now and next year, may look at more scholarships or increasing the amount of the four scholarships, as the budget for scholarships allows.

The scholarship is part of the company’s Marshallese Training and Employment Plan, according to Romeo Alfred, KRS Training specialist.

“KRS established MTEP to promote skill development opportunities for existing KRS employees as well as for potential KRS employees,” Alfred said.

Speaking for the principals, Abor Mwilong, principal for Calvary High School and president of the Ebeye Association of High School Principals stood and thanked Richardson.

Representing the RMI Office, Hiram Malolo added, “This will definitely encourage students to work harder knowing there are scholarships out there.”

Summer Camp opens with 'Fun' and 'Adventure'

Mig Owens
Assistant Editor

Mariah Teague loves the mess that comes with making her papier-mâché piñata, Madeleine Davie already knows 14 songs and Katy Steverson can't wait to build a turtle-shaped sandcastle at Emon Beach.

This year's Summer Camp is in full swing and will run through August 7.

New staff, kids and themes keep it fresh and exciting, according to Heather Schantz, assistant youth director, whose goal is for the kids to have new experiences and learn new things while having fun.

"All the staff is glad they're out here, and the kids are having a great time," Schantz said.

In all, 15 counselors are helping run Summer Camp this year, including three on-island hires that serve as translators. Three counselors are veterans, in that they've conducted the program before.

Formerly known as "Summer Fun," Summer Camp encompasses Kindercamp, for those who have completed kindergarten, Camp Adventure, for children who have completed first to fifth grades and Youth Adventure for those who have completed sixth to tenth grades.

The program is geared toward use by Army installations and U.S. embassies throughout the world.

The purpose of Summer Camp, according to Chelle Isenberg, Camp Adventure director, is to provide quality programming for youth throughout the summer and give them the opportunity to interact with children on the island and from Ebeye in a supervised area.

A total of 50 children from Ebeye are sponsored by Host Nations to attend Camp Adventure in the mornings, and any student enrolled in the island's guest student program can also participate.

One requirement of the new KRS contract was that the summer program be moved from Community Activities to Child and Youth Services. With the move came strict regulations and inspections by an evaluation team because CYS is a program of the Army.

According to Gerry Wolf, chief, Community Services, CYS was implemented with the contract award to KRS, but full implementation and certification was not required until 12 months after the contract award. Because all programs and procedures were not in place last summer, fee schedules were not changed.

"Now that the programs are all in place, it is a requirement that the Department of Defense/Department of the Army fee schedules be used for all CYS functions, including Child Development Center, School Age Services, Youth Sports and Summer Camp," Wolf said.

Under the new requirements, the fees for Summer Camp range from $18 to $70 depending on income. The $70 fee indicates the highest category ($70,000 and above), or if a sponsor chooses not to indicate family income, they are charged the higher fee.

No profit comes from this program, according to Ann McCoy, CYS coordinator, because operating costs exceed the fees, which cover the program, staff, facilities, supplies, snacks and field trips.

"Safety is our number one priority," McCoy said. "A lot of training goes on before activities get going to ensure safety. All of our counselors are now required to have state and federal background checks and the Army requires KRS to put more safety features in place. We balance the economic needs and concerns of residents with Army requirements."

One of those safety features is rigorous training for all counselors in order to meet the National School Age Care Alliance Standards. Prospective counselors attend one of 12 university sites across the nation for six weeks of training in such things as water safety, CPR, first aid, child abuse, programming, nutrition and behavior modification.

Under the watchful eye of the counselors, this year's Summer Camp program will feature at least one carnival, a sand castle contest and field trips to beaches and other points of interest across the island.

"Camp Adventure Presents" productions for parents and friends will take place every other Saturday starting June 26, and the entire community is invited to attend Desertfest on July 16 at 7 p.m., where the children will put on a larger production.

Parent participation is welcomed and encouraged. Any questions, concerns, or ideas about the School Age Program or Summer Camp can be directed to McCoy or brought to the next Parent Advisory Board, which takes place August 25.

Army's birthday marks 40 years at Kwajalein

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Kwajalein plays an important role in the U.S. defense, according to one of the Army's top decision makers in the Pacific region.

"Your work with missiles and missile defense testing programs is serving to dissuade and deter the enemies of our nation and to give our many allies and friends, not just in this region, but throughout the world, hope and resolve," said Maj. Gen. Karl Eikenberry, director for Strategic Planning and Policy for the U.S. Pacific Command.

Eikenberry spoke at the 229th Army Birthday Ball, held Saturday night at the Davye Davis Multi-Purpose Room. The speech highlighted a night filled with tradition, ceremony and some humor.

Eikenberry opened his remarks with a joke and said USAKA commander, Col. Jerry Brown, had asked him to speak only briefly. The major general then pulled from a briefcase a stack of folded computer paper and let the end fall to the floor below the podium. Amid the laughter, Eikenberry then gave his "Col. Brown's Top 10 Reasons Living on Kwajalein is a Good Deal."

The general next got serious, addressing the Army's tradition of self-sacrifice, the war on terror and the sacrifices by all those living and working on Kwajalein.

"We are all one team doing very difficult, very demanding and very challenging work together," he said.

He added a note of thanks to all spouses, saying their support made all the work possible.

The event opened with master of ceremonies, Maj. Steve Willhelm, roasting members of the audience.

Capt. Mitch Stevison led the gathering in honoring fallen Soldiers saluting a table set for one, by itself.

Eikenberry, the most senior Soldier present, then joined with Sgt. Solange Francis, the youngest Soldier present, to cut the birthday cake.

Local musicians and artists Jordan Pemberton, Brian Elderkin, Amber Banducci and Lindsay Davis performed during dinner.

Following dinner and Eikenberry's remarks, local band, The Zooks entertained the crowd with dance music.

Kwajalymphics build teamwork

By Mig Owens
Assistant Editor

Under clear, blue skies on June 11, an estimated 400 people took to the playing fields near the Richardson Theater to compete in the 2004 Kwajalymphics. Sense of humor and teamwork were the only requirements for participation in this first-ever business-community sporting event.

At the opening ceremony, Master Sgt. Stephen Lopez carried the ceremonial tiki torch to the stage, in front of which relay teams gathered. Then, with the swing of a hammer, Ike Richardson, KRS president, pronounced the games open.

With slightly modified rules to encourage participation by employees of all skill levels, the goal of Kwajalymphics was to increase teaming and communication within organizations supporting USAKA/RTS on the Kwajalein Atoll.

The commencement relay was the first of the day's ten events. After following instructions and finding their materials, the teams employed ingenuity to build the tallest free-standing structure using dried spaghetti noodles and marshmallows.

Team spirit was evident early on, particularly from the Dysfunctional team, who sported matching red shirts and name tags, waved a banner and recited their team chant.

"Our strategy is to psych the other teams out," Gina Sansone said, "because our athleticism is definitely lacking."

Because turnout exceeded expectations, events such as kickball and bowling spanned most of the afternoon, with teams participating at half-hour increments. Golf wiffleball chipping was also ongoing for several hours.

Force Majeure team coordinator, Brian Ponte, spent the afternoon making sure that his team showed up for events at the right time and place. Ponte's team name is French for 'act of God' or 'irresistible force,' a term used in contracts.

"Total domination," was the team's strategy, Ponte said with a smile. "Anything less is completely unacceptable and there will be consequences."

Points were awarded to the top six place finishers of each event based on a predetermined scale. Event co-chairs Mark Owens and Mark Paier kept a running tally of the totals during the afternoon-long event.

The old trailer location west of the Richardson Theater saw its share of the action as it hosted the egg toss, 50-yard three legged race, and paper airplane toss.

Dysfunctional's Katie Howell, whose team was made up of Security, Project Controls, Administration and Human Resources department employees, coached her teammates during the egg toss.

"I like that small departments get the chance to interact with other small departments," Howell said.

Kwajalymphics teams were employee-based with coed participation in all events, and events were also open to spouses. Linette Chewey ran the "K" Run relay with her husband, Lee on the Code 3 team.

"This is great for bringing everyone together in a fun, loving atmosphere – strengthening the community web," Chewey said.

The three-legged race brought coed teams from across the island, as well as Roi-Namur, resulting in three heats. Running alongside Steve Metta, Sansone joked, Bob Bills, left, and Val Gower and other members of Team Dysfunctional build a structure with spaghetti and marshmallows.

with fun, spirit and sports

"We ran like we had five legs."

LLab Rats Randy and Mary Anne Razook's initial strategy in the race was to go slow and steady – until they actually experienced the pace, at which time they said, "We just ran as fast as we could while avoiding eggshells."

Following the race was the paper airplane toss, in which each participant was given a standard-sized piece of paper. After designing, folding and testing, over 60 planes took to the air.

The action then moved to the Adult Pool, where the swimming relay and cannonball "Big Splash" contest took place.

Kwajalein newcomer, Penni Pierson participated in the swimming relay as a member of the Code Monkeys.

"I got to meet a lot of different people that I normally wouldn't see every day," Pierson said. "There's a spirit of kinmanship here."

Cheers and laughter resounded as the cannonball event got underway. 'Celebrity' judges included Col. Daugherty, Richardson, Metta and Dr. John Szczepanski, site manager of MIT/Lincoln Lab.

Bert Godlewski's last-minute entry in the cannonball event was an effort to gain points for his team, WESAKA. Godlewski said of his performance, "Height helped but gross tonnage is what's going to win the contest."

Spectator Kate Lollar came to watch her daughter, Sara, in the swim relay. Lollar stayed for the cannonball event, which she described as a "hoot." Though commenting midway through the event that the judging seemed to be based more on popularity than performance, Lollar says she's happy with the outcome.

With only three points separating the top four teams, the day's winners were announced at the closing ceremony. You'd Be Bored Without Us finished in first place and won a catered lunch. Second place went to Code Monkeys, who will enjoy a pizza party, and in a tie for third, Call 911 and Hospital Staph will both be treated to an ice cream social.

"I was extremely impressed with the participation in this inaugural event," Owens said.

"I hope that with the success of this event, we will continue to have the Kwajalympics on an annual basis."

The future of Kwajalympics certainly is on the minds of organizers, with talk of an increased number of shade tents, water, and volunteers next time around.

"We will definitely have to come up with a new commencement relay," Paier said, "as I can bet that there are teams out there already trying to figure out how to build a better marshmallow and spaghetti structure."

Country singer helps celebrate Army birthday

By Linda D. Kozaryn
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Country music star John Michael Montgomery helped celebrate the Army's 229th birthday by singing four of his hits at the Pentagon today.

Wearing camouflage fatigues, the Grammy-award winning singer blended in with the crowd when he arrived at the Pentagon courtyard concert site -- except for his tall, black cowboy hat, that is. Montgomery took time to shake hands, sign autographs and pose for pictures before going on stage.

Army Brig. Gen. James Kelley, chief of staff, U.S. Army Reserve Command, introduced the singer, noting that Montgomery has had 15 No. 1 country songs during a decade of hits and has sold more than 15 million records.

"His realistic lyrics capture the hardships and the determination and 'muddy boots' of our armed forces and their proud families," the general said. Montgomery's current hit, "Letters from Home," he added, is a tribute the nation's service members.

Montgomery described having a song about the military during a time of war has been a humbling and wonderful experience. He

"I hold it up and show my buddies, like we ain't scared and our boots ain't muddy, and no one laughs cuz there ain't nothin' funny when a soldier cries, and I just wipe my eyes. I fold it up, put it in my shirt, pick up my gun and get back to work. And it keeps me drivin' on. Waitin' on letters from home."

Country music star John Michael Montgomery, center, and his band play for service members and civilian employees at the Pentagon on June 16. Montgomery said that having a hit song — "Letters from Home" — about the military during a time of war has been a humbling and wonderful experience.

said he's met some "great American heroes in the military across the seas and families back here."

"This song," he said, "just really hit home for me, and as a matter of fact, that's what it's all about." "Letters from Home" tells the story of a deployed soldier who shares parts of his family's letters from home with his comrades in arms. The final chorus sums up the troops' feelings in the letter the soldier's dad sends, saying, "Son, you make me proud."

"I hold it up and show my buddies, like we ain't scared and our boots ain't muddy," the lyrics go, "and no one laughs cuz there ain't nothin' funny when a soldier cries, and I just wipe my eyes. I fold it up, put it in my shirt, pick up my gun and get back to work. And it keeps me drivin' on. Waitin' on letters from home."
